

X. Course Schedule

Unit I: Systems Level (third image) Theories -- examine state behavior by looking at the international system. At this level of analysis the nature of the system and the distribution of state power within it shift as states struggle to protect and advance their interests. The key variable is the power of the state within the system. Analysis at this level would look at the threats and opportunities faced by the United States in a post 9/11 environment and the calculations of the national interest related to them. It assumes that states similarly situated in the international system would behave in like ways.

Unit II: State and Societal Level (second image) Theories: examine the foreign policy behavior of states by looking at the conditions and processes within them. Regime type matters. Some cultures or ideologies may be particularly warlike. Causation for war might be found in economic imperatives of certain kinds of states, in their domestic political institutions, cultures, religions or ideologies. The focus is internal and on the particularities of the state in question. It assumes that differences inside states account for differing actions by states similarly situated in the international system.
